Grant Bucher, now living in Steuben County, is waging an 'unconventional' race for Congress

Grant Bucher's campaign

By MARK MILLER

Grant Bucher does not think running for Congress has much to do with issues and policies. And certainly nothing to do with public service experience.

He'll be happy to discuss that with you.

Grant Bucher

The Wells County native and 2008 Norwell High School graduate is running for the 3rd Congressional District seat being vacated by Jim

Banks which includes his native county. He is one of six seeking the Republican nomination in next May's primary election.

"I am trying to differentiate myself," he says. "I'm not running on issues or policies. I want you to know who I am and what my character is and then decide whether you want me to be your voice in Congress."

He would like to see a primary race that "emphasizes the depth of character rather than the width of name recognition."

Bucher will talk about issues, if you insist. His campaign emphasizes biblical values, anti-abortion policies, 2nd amendment rights, immigration reform and limited government. His website (bucherforus.com) sums it up this way: "It is my firm belief that 'The Issue' facing us today is the product of a nation straying from the Truth about God's greatness and mankind's brokenness."

As for experience, "If experience in holding a political office is the metric by which we have good Congresspeople," he says, "then we should not have the mess in D.C. we have."

Noting that there is a cumulative total of about 6,100 years of experience in both the House and Senate — and that does not count prior offices held — "it doesn't seem to be getting the job done."

He will instead point to his experience as a project manager in the construction business, currently for Weigand Construction, in which he oversees projects involving tens of millions of dollars

"My job is to represent people," he explains. "I represent the ownership of Weigand and I represent owners of the building and the people in the field building the project. I am accountable to these people. And I can tell you that I have had millions of dollars come across my desk, and thanks to the principles that have been instilled in me, all of it went exactly where it was supposed to go."

His career has provided opportunities to work with a wide variety of people with a wide variety of world views, all of which, he believes, has helped prepare him to serve the "750,000 souls" that populate the 13 counties in the 3rd Congressional District.

After graduating from Norwell High School, Bucher, 33, earned an engineering degree from Purdue University and then an MBA from Indiana University. He and his wife, the former Melinda Ripley from

Adams County, have two sons. One was born in California and the other in Michigan during his years as a project manager for Shambaugh & Sons. A desire to return to northeast Indiana spurred his career move to Wiegand Construction. His current work is focused on managing projects in Steuben County and at Hillsdale College, just across the state line from his family's current home

While his intent remained to spend his career in the construction industry, a series of events, discussions and circumstances convinced him that God was calling him to public service on the national level. Jim (Continued on Page 2)

Hamas releases third group of hostages as part of truce, says it will seek to extend the deal

By WAFAA SHURAFA and SAMY MAGDY to extend the cease-fire deal as long as possible.

DEIR AL-BALAH, Gaza Strip (AP) — The

fragile cease-fire between Israel and Hamas was back on track Sunday as the militants freed 17 more hostages, including 14 Israelis and the first American, in a third exchange under a four-day truce that the U.S. said it hoped would be extended. In turn, Israel released 39 Palestinian prisoners.

Most hostages were handed over directly to Israel, waving to a cheering crowd as they arrived at an air force base. Others left through Egypt. Israel's army said one was airlifted to a hospital, and the director of Soroka Medical Center said Elma Avraham, 84, was in life-threatening condition as "a result of an extended period of time when an elderly woman was not taken care of as needed."

The youngest hostage released was Abigail Edan, a 4-year-old girl and dual Israeli-American citizen whose parents were killed in the Hamas attack that started the war on Oct. 7. "What she endured was unthinkable," Biden said of the first American freed under the truce. He did not know her condition and did not provide updates on other American hostages. Biden said his goal was on the list, according to Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's office. Three more Thai nationals were released. Separately, Hamas said it released a Russian hostage "in response to the efforts of Russian President Vladimir Putin." The Russian-Israeli citizen was the first male hostage to be freed.

The Palestinian prisoners released were children and young men, ages 15-19, largely accused of public disorder, property damage and in some cases causing or threatening physical harm to Israeli officers by throwing stones and Molotov cocktails. Many were scooped up from protests and confrontations with troops. In turn, many Palestinians view prisoners held by Israel, including those implicated in attacks, as heroes resisting occupation.

A fourth exchange is expected on Monday – the last day of the cease-fire during which a total of 50 hostages and 150 Palestinian prisoners are to be freed. Most are women and minors.

International mediators led by the U.S., Egypt and Qatar are trying to extend the cease-fire that began Friday.

Growing number of states recycle, donate food headed to landfills

By DAVID R. MARTIN and MICHAEL CASEY

Associated Press
ELMSFORD, N.Y. (AP) — When Sean Rafferty got his start in the anything that wasn't sold got tossed

But on a recent day, Rafferty, the store manager for ShopRite of Elmsford-Greenburgh in New York, was preparing boxes of bread, donuts, fresh produce and dairy products to be picked up by a food bank. It's part of a statewide program requiring larger businesses to donate edible food and, if they can, recycle remaining food scraps.

Years ago, everything went in the garbage ... to the landfills, the compactors or wherever it was," said Rafferty, who has 40 years in the industry. "Now, over the years, so many programs have developed where we're able to donate all this food ... where we're helping people with food insecurities.'

New York is among a growing number of states targeting food waste over concerns it is taking up diminishing landfill space and contributing to global warming as meat, vegetables and dairy release the greenhouse gas methane after being dumped in a landfill. Rescuing unwanted fruits and vegetables, eggs, cereals and other food also helps to feed hungry

Globally, about a third of food is wasted. In the United States, it's even higher, at 40 percent, according to the Harvard Food Law and Policy Clinic. The U.S. spends about $218 billion each year growing and producing food that is wasted. About 63 million tons goes to waste, including 52.4 million tons that ends up in landfills and 10 million tons never harvested from farms.

"What's shocking to people often is not only how much we waste ... but also the impact," said Emily Broad Leib, a Harvard University law professor and director of the school's Food Law and Policy Clinic. (Continued on Page 2)

Russia says it downed Ukrainian drones headed for Moscow

By The Associated Press

Ukraine tried to attack Moscow with dozens of drones, Russian authorities said Sunday, just a day after Ukrainian officials reported that Russia had launched its most intense drone attack on Kyiv since the beginning of its full-scale war

Russian air defenses brought down at least 24 drones over the Moscow region — which surrounds but doesn't include the capital — and four other provinces to the south and west, the Russian Defense Ministry and Moscow Mayor Sergei Sobyanin reported in a series of Telegram updates. Neither referenced any casualties.

Andrei Vorobyev, governor of the Moscow region, wrote on Telegram that the drone strikes damaged three unspecified buildings there, adding that no one was hurt.

One drone crashed into a 12-story apartment building in about 113 miles south of Moscow, slightly wounding one resident and causing limited damage, local Gov. Aleksei Dyumin wrote on Telegram on Sunday morning.

Moscow's Vnukovo and Domodedovo airports also briefly shut down because of the drone attack, according to Russian state-run news agency Tass. Both appeared to have resumed normal operation by 6 a.m. local time Sunday, according to data from international flight tracking portals.

Russian Telegram channels speculated that Ukrainian forces had deployed a previously unseen type of drone in the purported strike, pointing out some similarities to the Iranian-made weapons Moscow routinely employs in its attacks on Ukraine. The Russian capital has come under attack from drones regularly since May, with Russian officials blaming Ukraine. Military analysts commented at the time that the early attacks deployed Ukrainian locally-made drones, which couldn't carry as heavy a payload as the Iranian-made Shaheds used by Russia.

Ukrainian officials didn't immediately acknowledge or comment on the strikes, which came a day after Russia targeted the Ukrainian capital with more than

Bucher runs for Congress

Banks' announcement that he would be running for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by Mike Braun came in the midst of that process. He acknowledges that it was a spiritual experience but says he is not running solely on that.

"I don't aspire to the office, but I aspire to the work," Bucher says. "I seek the restoration of the U.S. and I feel compelled and equipped to serve at the federal level."

Bucher has built his campaign on what he refers to as his three principles: "truth, accountability and unity."

He summarizes the first principle simply as "biblical truth and common sense," and expands more on the other

"We need to hold elected officials accountable, but more so the bureaucrats," he says. "I don't think there's enough conversation about that."

Bucher feels that Congress has abdicated their responsibilities - "sold out" is the term he uses — to the federal agencies they've created. He describes those agencies as a fourth branch of government "accountable

He is equally concerned about the growing divisiveness in the country and in Congress.

"It is critical that we do not succumb to tribalism and reject 50 percent of our population (saying) 'you have no place here," he continues. "Do we disagree with them? Absolutely, but let's draw them more into what is truth.'

He is hesitant to use the word "compromise" in his discussions. "That is intentional," he says.

'In the construction world, that's a bad word, it can bring sub-par results." In solving issues in his work, he explains, he sometimes has to find solutions involving quality, time and costs, "but you cannot, for example, compromise on the integrity of the structure."

In order to create unity, Bucher continues, he would use Jesus' model: "He consistently spoke the truth but he sometimes offended his followers in order to attract others to his cause."

Food headed to landfills

(Continued from Page 1) "Food waste causes about 8 percent to 10 percent of global greenhouse gas emissions.'

Broad Leib says 20 percent of water in the U.S. is used to grow food "that we then just throw away, so we're basically taking water and putting it directly into a landfill."

But she and others also note there is growing awareness of the need to do something about food waste in the U.S.

In 2015, the U.S. Department of Agriculture and Environmental Protection Agency announced a goal of 50 percent food waste reduction by 2030.

That has prompted a number of state-led initiatives, along with smaller, nonprofit efforts.

Ten states and the District of Columbia have passed legislation or executed policies to reduce, compost or donate waste. All 50 states have passed legislation shielding donors and recovery organizations from criminal and civil liability linked to donated food.

California and Vermont have launched programs converting residents' food waste into compost or energy, while Connecticut requires businesses, including larger food wholesalers and supermarkets, to recycle food waste. Farmers in before we throw food away Maryland can get a tax credit of up to $5,000 per farm for food they donate.

Several states have joined New York in setting up systems allowing food to be donated. Rhode Island requires food vendors servicing education institutions to donate any unused food to food banks, while Massachusetts limits the amount of food that businesses can send to landfills, which Broad Leib said has increased food donations in the state by 22 percent over two years.

New York's program is in its second year, and state officials believe it's having a significant impact.

As of late October, the program had redistributed 5 million pounds (2.3 million kilograms) of food the equivalent of 4 million meals — through Feeding New York State, which supports the state's 10 regional food banks and is hoping to double that number next year. Among those required to donate food include colleges, prisons, amusement parks and sporting venues.

New York's Westchester County has eight refrigerated trucks that pick up all types of perishable food, according to Danielle Vasquez, food donations coordinator for Feeding Westchester, one of the state's food banks.

The group started working with businesses in 2014 but has seen participation ramp up since the donation law went into effect last year. Much of the food collected goes to nearly 300 programs and partners throughout the county, including a mobile food pantry and the Carver Center, a nonprofit serving Port Chester's families and children, which has a pantry.

"Certainly, we should be reducing the amount we waste to start with, but then we should be feeding people if it's good, wholesome food," said Sally Rowland, supervisor with the state Department of Environmental Conservation's Organics, Reduction and Recycling section. "To me, it's a commonsense kind of thing and I think it's just kind of built that momentum of people understanding about how much food we're really wasting.'

60 Shahed drones. At least five civilians were wounded in the hourslong assault, which saw several buildings damaged by falling debris from downed drones, including a kindergarten. The wounded included an 11-year-old child, according to Kyiv Mayor Vitali Klitschko.

The Ukrainian air force early on Sunday said it had brought down eight of nine Shahed drones fired overnight by Russian forces.

Also on Sunday morning, the Russian Defense Ministry reported that two Soviet-made S-200 rockets fired by Kyiv were shot down over the sea of Azov, which stretches between the Crimean Peninsula and Ukraine's Russian-occupied southeastern coast.

According to local news sources, air raid sirens sounded earlier in Russian-annexed Crimea, which on Friday came under what Russian officials called a major drone attack. Road traffic was also briefly halted on Sunday morning across the 12-mile bridge that connects Crimea to the Russian mainland.

There were no reports of casualties, and no comment from officials in Kyiv.

Elsewhere, parts of Russian-occupied eastern Ukraine were left without power following a nighttime Ukrainian strike on a thermal power plant in the Donetsk region, a Moscowinstalled local official reported on Telegram Sunday. According to Denis Pushilin, who heads the province that Russia illegally annexed last year, the attack on the Starobesheve plant took out the electricity in parts of the occupied cities of Donetsk and Mariupol, along with other nearby areas.

On the outskirts of Donetsk, Russian troops have continued their attempts to advance near Avdiivka, the eastern town that has been a Ukrainian stronghold and fighting hot spot since the early days of the war, according to reports by the Ukrainian General Staff and analysis by the Washington-based Institute for the Study of War.

Indiana Chamber Reveals Top Legislative Priorities for 2024 Session

(INDIANAPOLIS) -The Indiana Chamber of Commerce unveiled its upcoming priorities at the 2024 Indiana Legislative Preview today. A panel discussion featuring General Assembly caucus leaders from both parties headlined the event.

"Enhancing our talent pipeline remains a critical focus," says Indiana Chamber President and CEO-elect Vanessa Green Sinders. "We look forward to working with lawmakers, employers and learning institutions across the state to continue momentum on workforce development and keeping Hoosiers gainfully employed."

Further strengthening career-connected learning expectations and opportunities for Indiana students and building on last year's House Enrolled Act 1002 will be a point of emphasis, notes Jason Bearce, Indiana Chamber vice president of education and workforce development.

"Indiana has a talent and quality worker shortage that is leaving too many positions unfilled and negatively affects attempts to lure companies to relocate to the state, ne asserts.

Also needed by employers and the workforce: additional efforts to enhance early childcare access and quality.

"We made a start at addressing this issue last session, but everyone realizes more needs to be done. The lack of affordable, high-quality childcare across Indiana is impacting Hoosier families and businesses all over the state. It's certainly one of the outside factors most negatively impacting attracting and retaining workers," Bearce shares.

Health - and health care - matters continue to resonate for the Indiana Chamber and its members as well. Among these is increasing Medicaid reimbursement rates to medical providers.

Braun talks gubernatorial competitors, governing

By WHITNEY ĎOWNARD

Indiana Capital Chronicle In 2018, Mike Braun was a political outsider who used his considerable wealth as the founder and CEO of Meyer Distributing to fund an underdog campaign to defeat incumbent Democratic U.S. Sen. Joe Donnelly. After just one term in Congress, Republican Braun decided to step back from federal government and return to his home state to run for governor. Sitting Gov. Eric Holcomb is term limited.

"I'm a problem solver by nature. When you run a small business for 17 years and build it into a regional and international company, that's what life's about (in order) to survive," Braun said. "And so I think that's going to be a differentiator when it comes to what you see in me versus the other candidates."

Compared to other states, the highest office in Indiana is relatively weak in favor of the General Assembly. But Braun said it wouldn't be the case for him.

"Not when someone's a spark plug like I am and is entrepreneurial in nature," Braun said. "You can certainly be more aggressive on the agenda."

On issues

But on issues, Braun has been quieter than his GOP competitors, which includes: former Secretary of Commerce Brad Chambers, Lt. Gov. Suzanne Crouch, Fort Wayne businessman Eric Doden, former Attorney General Curtis Hill and the devout Jamie Reitenour.

He referred to his wideranging "Freedom and Opportunity" agenda as a template for policy proposals but said more specific details would emerge in the early months of 2024. That webpage on his campaign site includes a myriad of issues, ranging from border security and standing up to "woke" corporations to his stance on election security and against abortion rights.

Instead, Braun highlighted several efforts he'd worked on at the federal level over the years, including Promising Pathways, a bill to establish an expedited drug review process for treatments used for rare diseases with a poor prognosis.

"We've got more of them cooking up and we'll get more stuff done," Braun said about whether he felt he had unfinished business in D.C.

He noted that the bill has Democratic support, signaling his ability to work across the aisle on practical matters.

"I'm going to be the first governor that has ever considered taking on the high cost of health care and our poor outcomes," Braun said. "It's taking on the biggest lobby in our state and out there (in D.C.)."

When asked about the multiple health care bills touted by legislators, many of which have long roll-in time periods, he called it "lip service," adding that the industry needed to "embrace competition and transparency.

"It's the biggest lobby and they write a lot of checks," Braun said. "... we've got to do better and everybody's going to be with me on that — including almost all independents and many Democrats."

He pointed to his own efforts to keep health care costs low at his company, saying that he hasn't raised premiums in 15 years. He said the state needed to strike laws restricting competitors in the hospital and insurance spheres.

"I want to make it more entrepreneurial, more market driven," Braun said.

Adding competition and choice is also how he'd approach education, which makes up over 50 percent of the state budget.

"I came from a great public school system and most of our public school systems are pretty good. But in places where you've got one supplier, you're generally not going to have meteoric results — you're going to have mediocrity." Braun said. "... I want parents to be at the forefront of what they think is most important for their kids. Anything I've learned is that it can't be a federal solution - they don't do anything well and it costs a fortune.

Additionally, he wanted to find a state-oriented, innovative solution to the child care shortage - but acknowledged that he had more background on health care issues and was still compiling ideas.

On opponents

When asked about others using his Congressional record against him, Braun noted that none of his competitors have much of a record. Aside from breaking Senate ties, Lt. Gov. Suzanne Crouch has held administrative positions in the Holcomb and Pence administrations and hasn't voted as a legislator in a

Neither Eric Doden nor Brad Chambers have won elected office and Curtis Hill didn't cast votes as the state's attorney general.

"None of them can say, with a record, what they do; it's only aspirational. And I'll point that out, too. I basically practice what I preach," Braun said.

Braun proudly touted his ranking as one of Congress' most effective freshman lawmakers, crediting his background as an entrepreneur. He said that he has a record showing he's "good at putting his neck out there and keeping it intact."

He observed that he alone had won the endorsement of former President Donald Trump, "the most popular Republican in the state."

Attacks, like the one from Doden last week, only used information that had previously been debated and dissected in the public

"If you got that big disparity in the polls, your tendency is going to be to go negative," Braun said.

On being governor

Governing in Indiana requires a lot of collaboration, especially with the General Assembly, which holds the purse strings. Braun served in the Indiana House between 2014 and 2017 prior to his Congressional run.

In contrast with his time in federal government, Braun said fiscal issues wouldn't be as worrisome due to Indiana's requirement to pass a balanced biennial budget.

Still, Braun said he "want(ed) to make sure we make our government... a little leaner (and) go through every agency to make sure it's running as efficiently as a business.

In his 2018 campaign, Braun vowed to limit himself to just two terms. He said the decision to leave after one term was recognizing that it could be his best chance for the governor post, considering that whomever won in 2024 would likely run again in

"I might decide it's time to fish full time by then," Braun said. "I made this

Financial Focus Can you make charitable giving less 'taxing'?

Once again, it's the season of generosity. If you're thinking of making charitable gifts, what should you know?

For starters, make sure that any char ity you're planning to support is reputable and uses its funds wisely. You can find valuable information on charities at the Charity Navigator website.

You might also think about the tax benefits of charitable giving. If you itemize on your taxes, you can get a deduction for gifts of cash or other financial assets.

But you might also think about longer-term charitable giving strategies that offer tax advantages. One such possibility is a donor-advised fund, which allows you to make charitable contributions and receive an immediate tax deduction. And if you give appreciated assets, such as stocks, you might also avoid capital gains taxes.

Once you turn 73 and must start taking withdrawals from some of your retirement accounts, you could consider having some of this money go directly to charities through a qualified charitable distribution, which can be excluded from your taxable income.

See your tax advisor to determine if these strategies are appropriate for you. If so, they might help make your charitable giving a less taxing event.

What kind of democracy are we when politicians have to fear violence?

Now that the dust has settled on the House speakership fight, both Washington and the media have been eager to move on to other issues: the Israel-Hamas war, the Trump trials, the recent elections, and, on Capitol Hill, a potential government shutdown and various funding bills. These are all important, but we shouldn't let the ugly side of American politics that surfaced during the speakership fight be forgotten. It may not be front and center right now, but its shadow looms over everything.

I'm talking, of course, about the threats of violence against House members—Republicans—who didn't fall in line behind Jim Jordan, one of the candidates. Ken Buck, a Colorado Republican, said he had received at least four death threats. Nebraska Republican Ken Bacon told reporters he'd gotten text messages and phone calls that so worried his wife she slept with a loaded gun near her bedside. Iowa's Mariannette Miller-Meeks reported "credible death threats and a barrage of threatening calls." A Georgia Republican told his colleagues that threats had led him to ask a sheriff back home to dispatch a deputy to his daughter's school and to station an officer by his recent threats were only the latest example of a political environment that has become a true threat to our strength as a country. I'm not just talking about threats against election workers, the constant threats against high-profile legislators, or the Jan. 6 assault on the Capitol—though that was (so far) the low point in our recent history. If you read McKay Coppins' September article in The Atlantic or his new book on Utah Sen. Mitt Romney, on which that article was based, Romney made plain what's been happening. "One Republican congressman confided to Romney that he wanted to vote for Trump's second impeachment, but chose not to out of fear for his family's safety," Coppins wrote. The same calculations took place among GOP senators during the Senate trial.

can a democracy last," he asks, "when its elected leaders live in fear of physical violence from their constitu-

That nicely sums things up. Especially because a recent survey by the Public Religion Research Institute and the Brookings Institution found that about 23 percent of respondents agreed that "because things have gotten so far off track, true American patriots may have to resort to violence in order to save our country." That's an alarmingly high number of people who believe that preserving the essence of the United States means harming or killing others.

When, of course, it's just the opposite. Our entire system is built on the idea that, however passionate political disagreement might become, we give the people we elect to public office the ability to sort things out. In a society as diverse as ours, by pretty much every conceivable measure, it's the only way to make progress on addressing our needs and resolving our challenges.

This is why values like compromise and negotiation are so crucial: Because state legislators and members of Congress are bound to disagree—after all, they represent people with different backgrounds and beliefs they have to find some form of common ground in order to move forward. This shared understanding of what we're about as a country has been fundamental to our this. They come from people for whom the normal give and take of the political or legislative process is unbearable, because it might produce an outcome they don't like. In essence, they don't share most Americans' belief that we're all in this together. And, as Romney's revelations to Coppins make clear, they distort legislative outcomes by making our elected representatives violate their own beliefs out of fear.

what America is or ever should be about.

Politics is about candidates, and candidates are about leadership, and leadership is about truth and character. That Ramaswamy ignored what he was asked, to explain why Republican voters should prefer him to former president Donald Trump, is far more relevant than issues about party bureaucracy.

Reasonable scrutiny shows that the Republican candidate selection process is working well. Candidates are presenting themselves in the political marketplace and the marketplace is evaluating and choosing. In the first debate there were eight

WE'VE BEEN HERE

SO LONG, I CAN'T

REMEMBER-

This deliberative process is likely to be enhanced as 2023 rolls into 2024, because the policies on two issues - abortion and cannabis legalization — reveal that the current political establishment is out of whack with public opinion.

On abortion, the 2022 Hoosier Survey by Ball State University's Bowen Center found that a majority of Hoosiers surveyed (56.7%) believe abortion should be Politicking legal in all or most cases. Most Hoosiers — more than 76% — find abortion to be an important or at least somewhat important issue. This survey occurred after the Republican super majorities passed the nation's most far-reaching abortion restrictions that previous August. On cannabis legalization, according to the 2022

BSU Hoosier survey of 600 Hoosier adults, 85% said marijuana should be legal in some form or another (29% said they were for medical marijuana only, while 56% said they were for marijuana for personal use).

The opinion of a majority of Hoosier voters are similar to those sentiments in other Republican or "red" states.

Earlier this month, Ohio voters passed Issue 2 (the legalization of recreational cannabis) by a 57% to 43%. Other cannabis referendums have passed in conservative states such as Montana with 52%. In 2018 Michigan voters passed recreational cannabis with 56%. In 2020, the Illinois General Assembly legalized recreational marijuana.

According to the National Conference of State Legislatures, 23 states, two territories, and the District of Columbia have legalized small amounts of cannabis for adult recreational use. Most recently, Rhode Island and Connecticut legalized the recreational use of cannabis. On April 7, 2021, Virginia's legislature accepted the governor's recommended amendments for a significantly speedier implementation window for HB 2312 which would legalize recreational cannabis use in Virginia and establish a regulated commercial market. New York legalized cannabis its 2021 session, as did New Mexico.

Voters have also been voting to preserve abortion rights, even in the most conservative states. Earlier this month, Ohio voters by a 56.6% to 43.4% verdict to amend the state's constitution to give individuals the "right to make and carry out one's own reproductive decisions," including on abortion.

Kansas voters passed by 59% guaranteeing abortion rights in 2022, just weeks after the U.S. Supreme Court negated Roe v. Wade. In other red states like Kentucky and Montana, 52% of voters backed similar measures.

of the highest levels on record since nonpartisan researchers began tracking it in the 1970s." The WSJ reported that some 55% of respondents say it should be possible for a pregnant woman to obtain a legal abortion if she wants it for any reason. Nearly nine in 10 poll respondents support abortion access in the event of rape or incest, or when a woman's health is seriously endangered by the pregnancy.

Brian Howey

Currently Indiana is dominated by Republicans.

Not a single Republican who voted for restricting abortions lost in 2022, three months after the new law was signed by Gov. Eric Holcomb. Democrats picked up only one seat in the House, increasing their number of seats to 30, but in the combined popular vote for House candidates, Republicans won 66%. Republicans have also blocked all cannabis

In the secretary of state's race that year, Republican Diego Morales defeated Democrat Destiny Wells by 14%. Wells is now challenging Republican Attorney General Todd Rokita, who has been an ardent pro-life defender. He was recently sanctioned by the Indiana Supreme Court for comments he made on the case of a 10-year-old Ohio rape victim who successfully sought an abortion in Indiana while the procedure was still legal here. Rokita had said on Fox News his office would investigate Dr. Caitlin Bernard, who provided the abortion. The Disciplinary Commission of the Indiana Supreme Court claimed that Rokita violated various portions of the Indiana Rule of Professional Conduct when he spoke about the pending investiga-

Rokita was found by the Supreme Court to have engaged in "attorney misconduct" earlier this month.

We believe the population does not have the time for this side show," Wells said in kicking off her campaign earlier this week. "We want to get back to serving Hoosiers."

Rokita shrugged off the Supreme Court sanctions, saying, "First things first, I deny and was not found to have violated anyone's confidentiality or any laws. I was not fined. And I will continue as Indiana's duly elected attorney general.'

Until that occurs, nothing will change, no matter what the public sentiment is.

were five. In the next, three, kicked off the last Republican debate by asking Vivek maybe four. Ramaswamy, "Why should I wrote in this column you be the nominee and not that when Trump decided the former president?" to not participate in the debates that it wouldn't be a bad thing. It would give the others a chance to present themselves to the public. The greatest beneficiary of this has been Nikki Haley, Parker who, at the time of the first debate, was polling, per the RealClearPolitics average, 3.2% nationally. Now she stands at 10.7%.

Perhaps this is really what is bothering Ramaswamy, who was polling 7.2% at the time of the first debate and now stands at 4.9%. I don't think he can blame McDaniel for this.

Gov. Ron DeSantis, whose polling imploded over the course of the year, dropping from 28.8% at the beginning of January to 14.3% at the time of the first debate, has not succeeded to capture hearts and minds through the debates and now stands with little change at 14.8%.

Trump, of course, has been hovering at 50 points beyond the rest over the whole period. And maybe this is where things will remain. But we need an open and free market for political ideas and, to the extent that the Republican National Committee can influence this, I think McDaniel has performed reasonably well.

Does the Republican Party have challenges? Yes, of course. But this is not because of the RNC.

The chaos that prevailed in the House in picking a speaker shows a party that is divided on important issues, and this is not a good thing. If there is disappointment regarding Republican performance in recent elections, this is the reason, not party bureaucracy.

It is clear what is wrong with the Democrats. The American people are looking for alternative answers on our big problems, and Republicans must provide a clear other voice.

How will the massive expansion of government, which translates into huge debt, huge spending and slow growth, be fixed? How will our broken entitlement systems — Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid — that consume some two-thirds of our federal spending, be fixed?

What is our nation's place as leader in the free world? And how will we revitalize our deteriorated defense and military capability?

How will we restore our lost moral clarity and deal with abortion, marriage, family and children? The latest Census Bureau projection showing a shrinking and aging country does not portray a nation with a future.

The Republican candidate that chooses to courageously and honestly answer these questions can capture hearts and minds of American voters. Meanwhile, civility will help. It is worth remembering Ronald Reagan's 11th commandment: "Thou shalt not speak ill of another Republican."

I have been looking through lots of old papers that I will want to get to family members that are interested in their family history. One family that I have pictures and clipping of has the surname of Shepler. In my collection I have a hand written letter on United States Army stationary. It is signed Arwid Shepler and at the end he reveals where he is serving, I think in WWII.

He writes: Down in the sunbaked swampland, Camp Clairborne is the spot; battling the fierce mosquito in the land that God forgot. Down with the chiggers and rattlers, down where the boys get blue,down where the mud is knee high, a thousand miles from you.

We are soldiers of the infantry earning our meager pay, defending people with millions for one seventy a day. We're living for tomorrow only to see our gals hoping that when we return they havent wed our pals. From Arwid - Camp Clairborne, Louisiana.

In the same scrapbook page there is a clipping of Capt. Myron Shepler who was at Camp Shelby, Miss. Both these boys were sons of Bill and Myrle Shepler of Zanesville.

Jets march back to defeat Raiders in ACAC girls basketball opener

By RICK SPRUNGER

Southern Wells' Lady Raiders put up a strong fight against Adams Central Saturday night but ultimately came up short, falling to the visiting Jets, 59-48, in the Allen County Athletic Conference opener for both Southern Wells fell to 1-5 overall while Adams Central improved to 2-5.

The Raiders got the early jump, surging to a 17-8 lead on a pair of free throws by Kenzie Paxson a minute into the second quarter.

They rode the shooting of Gracie Reeves, who canned a trio of three-pointers and scored 11 first-quarter points on 4-for-5 shooting from the

But when Adams Central switched to a man-toman defense, it got a hand in Reeves' face and did not allow her to take a single shot the rest of the night.

She finished with 12 points.

"Gracie played great in the first quarter," acknowledged her coach, Jessica Killingbeck, after the game. "But when they switched to the man-to-man, we got stagnant on offense and stopped looking for her."

Turnovers also played a

Three straight Southern Wells miscues early in the period allowed Adams Central to get off the deck.

Adams Central wrapped a bucket underneath from Grace Fisher and a threepointer by Ava Stafford around traveling and overand-back violations by the Raiders. Kate Fisher stole the ball and got it to Stafford for a baseline jumper that got the Jets back in it at 17-15.

Southern Wells steadied a bit and maintained a 27-24 halftime lead as Ashlie Needler scored six of her game-high 16 points in the quarter. But two bad passes three gave the visitors comthat sailed out of bounds in the final half-minute kept the Raiders from increasing the margin

"We need to get better at taking care of the basketball," said Killingbeck later. "We have a lot of young players who are trying to move from eighth-grade or junior varsity ball to varsity speed. We've been shooting well all year, and we are better in every category this year, including rebounding and shot selection. But we need to cut down on the turnovers.'

Then, with Southern Wells on top, 33-28, midway through the third quarter, Adams Central went to an all-out full-court press, and the game flipped dramatically in the Jets' favor.

Two hurried three-point misses and two turnovers, coupled with Needler's fourth foul, gave the Jets an opening, and they took full advantage.

Buckets by Stafford and Alexa Brotherton and four free throws by Grace Fisher vaulted the Jets on top,

"We were able to use our quickness and athleticism to hurry them up a little bit and make things hectic," said Adams Central coach Kyle Roe. "We forced them to rush their shots a little bit."

"We panicked," said Killingbeck flatly.

The Raiders crept back to 38-37 by the end of the quarter but missed three free throws in the final 0:47 that could have created a tie or put them in the lead heading into the last period. And then, Adams Central ran away and hid.

Two baskets by Brotherton, a rebound putback by Grace Fisher, along with buckets by Audrey Eisberg and Ashlyn Doster, and a pair of Fisher free throws against a Karlee Warner mand at 48-40 with 5:14 left.

Southern Wells finished 18-for-48 from the field for a .375 shooting percentage and outrebounded the Jets, 36-32, but finished with 18 turnovers to Adams Central's seven.

The Jets placed four players in double figures, getting 14 points from Grace Fisher, 11 each from Schwartz and Stafford, and 10 from Brotherton. They were 22-for-52 from the floor for .423.

"I was proud of our girls for competing," Killingbeck said with a smile. "They gave their all for 32 minutes. We haven't had that all year, so that was a definite area of improvement.'

Adams Central won the junior varsity contest, 22-18, in overtime.

Aubrey Meyer scored eight points, Erika Beavans five, Jailynn Chase three, and Remi Holmes two for Southern Wells.

Southern Wells will travel to Muncie Burris at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 29. sports@news-banner.com

QB Hudson Card pulls the ace as Boilermakers rally past the Hoosiers for Old Oaken Bucket

By MICHAEL MAROT AP Sports Writer

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Purdue quarterback Hudson Card dealt with the rib soreness each time he contorted his body Saturday.

He made sure rival Indiana felt his pain in a different way.

Card threw three touchdown passes, matching his career high, and scored on a 10-yard run with 2:39 left to give the Boilermakers a 35-31 victory over rival Indiana — keeping the Old Oaken Bucket for a third straight year.

"It's painful," coach Ryan Walters said, describing the left rib injury. "Everybody knows this is the last game so as he long as he could throw the ball, he wanted to play. I think it was Monday or Tuesday when he wasn't looking right or feeling right, he said, 'Coach, I'm playing.' So we planned accordingly." Walters couldn't have drawn it up any

His ace delivered his most masterful performance all season, completing 21 of 34 for 275 yards including a the beautiful 44-yard completion to Deion Burks on the first play of the decisive drive. He also ran 12 times for 85 yards, nimbly avoiding tacklers on his way to the gamechanging score.

And as much as it hurt Card to play, he knew it would have hurt even more if he hadn't been leading the Boilermakers (4-8, 3-6 Big Ten) to their third home win and the 300th at Ross-Ade Stadium, which concluded its centennial season.

"It's never fun not playing," said Card, who sat out last week because of the left rib injury. Indiana (3-9, 1-8) closed out another forgettable season with another frustrating finale. The Hoosiers lost their final three games by a total of 10 points, blowing late leads in all three.

This time, the collapse began with a kickoff out of bounds and the long completion from Card to a wide-open Burks. Four plays later, Indiana trailed 35-31. Burks had seven catches for 84 yards.

Indiana responded by reaching the Boilermakers 35-yard line only to have it stall because of a stop on third-and-1 and again when Brendan Sorsby drew an intentional grounding call on fourth down.

Season over.

Michigan beats Ohio State for 3rd straight win in "The Game" rivalry

By RALPH D. RUSSO AP College Football Writer ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — With more than two years of excellence being questioned and their coach banned from the Big House, J.J. McCarthy, Blake Corum and No. 3 Michigan stared down No. 2 Ohio State again and earned a victory that will go down as one of the biggest in the history of college football's winningest program. Rod Moore's interception in Michigan territory with 25 seconds left sealed a 30-24 win for the Wolverines on Saturday, running their win streak over the Buckeyes to three games while staying unbeaten with Jim Harbaugh serving out a suspension. McCarthy, a third-year quarterback who could leave Michigan having never lost to Ohio State, said Harbaugh's message to the Wolverines on Friday night echoed that of his old coach, the late Bo Schembechler.

'The whole mantra: the team, the team, the team," McCarthy said. He said Harbaugh told them: "We are that team." Moore's pick set off a celebration on the home team's sideline. McCarthy took a knee, Michigan fans poured over the brick walls onto the field and the Wolverines (12-0, 9-0) were off to their third straight Big Ten title game. In a season of high expectations that now has a championship-or-bust feel, Michigan is a victory away from a third consecutive College Football Playoff appearance.

"We're not done," said Corum, who ran for 88 yards and two TDs. For coach Ryan Day and the Buckeyes (11-1, 8-1), it's another year of lamenting a loss in the most important game on the schedule for Ohio State and wondering what has happened to the program that spent a decade and a half dominating Michigan.

Day is now 1-3 against the Wolverines, losing his last three. Before that skid, Ohio State had won eight straight and 15 of 16 against Michigan, including a 7-0 record under Day's predecessor, Urban Meyer.

"We're all disappointed," Day said. "We know what this game means to so many (Continued on Page 7)

Boilermakers top Hoosiers

"You're trying to get a yard," Indiana coach Tom Allen said. "To me, that's what you've got to be able to do. Frustrating once again. Couldn't finish. Got to finish, got to finish, got to finish."

Sorsby was 17 of 31 with 226 yards, three touchdown passes and three interceptions while rushing 15 times for 54 yards. E.J. Williams Jr. had five catches for 97 yards.

THE TAKEAWAY

Indiana: The Hoosiers played their five most competitive over the final five weeks though it sure didn't show up in the record.

Now comes the big question for Indiana athletic director Scott Dolson: Will he keep Allen for an eighth full season?

Purdue: Walters' first season fell well short of expectations. Purdue struggled early, struggled at home, struggled with turnovers and struggled with scoring defense. Now that Walters knows what he has, it will be interesting to see the roster changes he makes for 2024.

UP NEXT

Indiana: Hosts Florida International on Aug. 31.

Purdue: Hasn't yet announced an opening day opponent for next season.

people. To come up short is crushing." McCarthy went 16 for 20 for 148 yards and a touchdown.

"In critical situations, I'm going to out the ball in your hands," offensive coordinator Sherrone Moore — filling in for Harbaugh — said he told McCarthy before the game.

The 119th Ohio State-Michigan game — the 13th top-five matchup between the schools and yet another with Big Ten and national championship implications — was guaranteed to be memorable even before it kicked off.

With Michigan being investigated by the NCAA for allegations of in-person scouting and sign stealing, and Harbaugh finishing a three-game suspension imposed by the Big Ten, the circumstances around The Game were unprecedented and the animosity between the rivals never higher.

"There's a lot of thoughts and things that I would love to say, but all I know is this team is as good as any team in the country and they prove it every week," said Moore, who replaced Harbaugh for the fourth time

The sign-stealing scandal has caused fans all over the Big Ten, especially in Columbus, Ohio, to call into question Michigan's resurgence under Harbaugh since 2021.

'No one cried. No one whined," Corum said. "The job has to get done no matter what." The only sign of Harbaugh was on the pregame videoboard montage. Moore seemed to make all the right moves. Michigan went 3 for 3 on fourth downs, implemented its backup quarterback for a couple of plays to gain 22 yards on the ground and executed a halfback pass to set up a fourth-quarter field goal that put Michigan up 10. After Ohio State cut the lead to 27-24 with 8:05 left on a 14-yard touchdown pass from Kyle McCord to All-American Marvin Harrison Jr., Michigan proceeded to drain seven minutes off the clock and James Turner kicked a 37-yard field goal to make it 30-24 with 1:05 remaining.

"We've got to get off the field," Day said. McCord, Harrison and the Buckeyes had 1 minute to go 81 yards with no timeouts. They made it to the Michigan 37 before McCord's second interception of the day on a wobbly pass toward Harrison closed it out. McCord was hit as he threw.

As expected with two of the best defenses in the country, it took a while for the offenses to get rolling.

Will Johnson picked off McCord deep in Ohio State territory to set up a fourth-andinches touchdown dive by Corum. Michigan converted two more fourth-and-shorts on a touchdown drive that ended with McCarthy threading a needle to Roman Wilson from 22 yards out.

The Buckeyes weren't sure Wilson held on, but the call was confirmed by video review.

Badly needing a response down 14-3 in the second quarter, Ohio State marched 73 yards and McCord hit Emeka Egbuka for a tying 3-yard touchdown by TreVeyon Henderson. McCord was 18 for 30 for 271 yards.

Then it was Michigan's turn for a long drive that Corum capped with a 22-yard touchdown, his school-record 22nd of the

Too old for a third kid?

Dear Annie: I'm a newly married ness' sake. One rule 32-year-old woman, and my husband is of thumb to avoid 31. We've been married for three months, and we're both really excited to share the the holidays is to holiday season together for the first time as husband and wife.

My childhood family is very small. I only have my mom and sister nearby and a brother who lives 2,000 miles away. My sister has been married to her husband for three years, and every year we have been celebrating holidays with my sister, her husband, his parents and my mom. Things have been fine up until last year.

My brother, who lives across the country, came out here for a month during the holidays. My brother is the different one in a family of conservative Christians. He is a homosexual liberal; he is still very loved nonetheless. My brother-inlaw's parents have never met him before. Knowing how they feel about gay people, he has never come out and told them that he's gay. But they must have discussed him and figured it out on their own, because two days before Christmas last year, they told us they were not coming because they couldn't be around someone with "his views and lifestyle."

Of course, we were hurt and very offended because he is a member of our family. Anyway, my husband is not religious, but he is a wonderful, sweet man and the most incredible husband. He and I have decided to host Christmas this year at our new house, and my brotherin-law's parents will be there. I'm worried they will be rude to my husband once they discover his lack of religion.

My mother-in-law and I are very close, so she of course knows about the whole situation that happened last year and is ready to stick up for us both; however, I'm hoping that won't be necessary although given the way they are, I'm truly expecting the worst. Any advice on how to handle the situation if that does in fact happen? — Worried Wife in Mississippi politics. Dear Annie: At 54, my mother, already blessed with two academically accomplished children in the 8th and 12th grades, yearns for a third child. I am nearly 18 years old and will soon leave for college. My father, 57, is adamant that he doesn't want another baby. With retirement as a middle-school teacher within a decade's grasp, the idea of raising another child weighs heavily on him, having managed students his whole life.

Nobody except my mother wants another child. To facilitate this wish without enduring another pregnancy, she's exploring surrogacy, encouraged by medical professionals who believe her fertility levels can produce a new life.

I'm concerned about my mother's demanding work schedule, as she works from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., yet she still strongly desires to add another child to our fam-

Would a 12-year-old want a father in his 70s? Am I selfish in questioning the allocation of resources, as my mother contemplates funding a new lifetime while lamenting her inability to pay full tuition for a private college? Is it OK for my mother to divide our family, countering everyone's wishes but her own? — Parenting at 70

Dear Parenting at 70: Your mom would be parenting at 54 at first. A 12-year-old wants a loving father, and it doesn't matter what age he is. If your mom really wants a child, that is up to her and your father. Try not to place your own judgement on her and focus instead on how exciting college will be for you.

My Answer

By Dr. Billy Graham

Q: Having graduated at the top of my class, engaged to be married, and ready to take on the world of international travel, my life collapsed when none of the leading corporations hired me, my fiancée ran off with my best friend, and the world closed down because of COVID-19! I haven't recovered yet, badly disenchanted by all of the promises that the future was mine to create. In the midst of this horror, I found the saving light of Christ, and now I want to help prevent others from believing the false narratives that people are basically good and self-sufficient. - F.D.

A: Human nature ever intent to live indepen-

We will never be 'good' apart from God

dently of God and His transforming grace - claims that environment, education, and right mental attitudes can change the heart and make it pure. This is the argument of humanists.

There are many who say that our mental attitude toward life needs to be changed: "If we think right, we are right." To them the problem of evil is a psychological one. "Think positively. After all," they say, "the Bible says, 'As [a man] thinks in his heart, so is he" (Proverbs 23:7, NKJV). The problem is that they are not putting the verse in context, for the Bible also says that the heart of man is deceitful and inherently wicked (see Jeremiah 17:9). People are being told that they are self-sufficient and to be happy all that is required is to think happy thoughts. Such thoughts might cheer us and make us feel empowered, but they will never change us to be what God commands us to be. The "do-it-yourself" rage is spreading everywhere, but it cannot be applied to living life as God

We will never be "good" apart from God. The heart of man can only be changed by Jesus Christ. Only He can create in us new hearts (see Ezekiel 36:26) that will follow the goodness of the Lord (see Psalm 31:19).

Rosalynn and Jimmy Carter: global power couple, best friends and life mates

By BILL BARROW Associated Press

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) -Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter could not remember their first meeting. She was a newborn. He wasn't long out of diapers himself, a would-be U.S. president peering down at the future first lady his mother had delivered a few days earlier.

What flourished in the near-century to follow was a partnership that won the Georgia governor's office, the White House and then propelled the Carters through four decades as global humanitarians. Undergirding that path was a small-town love story that made them more than a power couple: They were life mates and best friends.

Rosalynn Carter died Nov. 19 at the age of 96. The former president, now 99, was with her when at their home in Plains, where they lived all their lives, with the exceptions of his college and Navy years, one gubernatorial term and their White House years from 1977-81.

Rosalynn was my equal partner in everything I ever accomplished," Jimmy Carter said in a statement released upon her death by The Carter Center, which they co-founded in 1982 after leaving Washington. "She gave me wise guidance and encouragement when I needed it. As long as Rosalynn was in the world, I always knew somebody loved and supported me.'

It is not known whether the 39th president, now mostly using a wheelchair and hospital bed in his 10th month of hospice care, will attend tributes that begin Monday. Those close to the family say they expect he will make every effort, especially for an invitation-only funeral Wednesday in Plains and private burial in a plot the couple eventually will

"It's hard to think of one of them without the other," said Jill Stuckey, a longtime friend who saw the couple often during Rosalynn Carter's last months.

The former first lady often campaigned separately from her husband to expand their reach: "If I go with Jimmy I just sit there," she once said. "I can use my time better than that.'

As president, Jimmy Carter sent her abroad as an official diplomat. She attended Cabinet meetings. They avoided dancing with others at White House dinners. After the presidency, they built The Carter Center together in Atlanta. They met with world leaders, monitored elections and fought disease in developing nations.

They read the Bible together each night, even over the phone, a practice that endured as they aged. Sometimes they read aloud in Spanish to stay proficient in their second language. And they held hands often:

at home, in church, walking down Pennsylvania Avenue on Inauguration Day in 1977, and as she lay on her deathbed in the home they built before his first legislative election in 1962.

"We don't go to sleep with some remaining differences between us," the former president told The Associated Press in 2021.

Rosalynn said she first "fell in love with Jimmy's picture" hanging on his sister's bedroom wall. Then, in the summer of 1945, when he was home from the U.S. Naval Academy, Ruth Carter convinced her brother to go on a date with Rosalynn.

The next morning Jimmy Carter told his mother he would marry Rosalynn

"I had never had a boy kiss me on a first date," she recalled. Yet she saw seeds of something deeper than teenage romance. Usually shy, she found she "could talk to him, actually talk to him."

They were married July 7, 1946, and set off for his first Naval appointment.

When James Earl Carter Sr. died in 1953, his namesake son moved his family back to Georgia — without asking his wife. He remembered six decades later how "cool" she was to him for months because of the move, with the rift not closing completely until she made herself his indispensable business partner in their peanut farming operation.

Still, the future president did not consult his wife when he launched his first political campaign. In that instance, however, Rosalynn Carter was on board and willingly stayed behind to run the business in Plains when he went to Atlanta as a state senator.

Family and close friends remember as a bond that thrived not just on mutual respect but competitiveness. They raced to finish writing their next books or best the other in tennis, skiing or any other pursuit in their later years. They kept score as they fished.

"'How many did she catch? How big were they?" Stuckey recalled the former president asking her one day as she bounced between the two on the edges of their pond in Plains. "I'd go back to Rosalynn, and she'd say, 'What'd he say? How many does he have?'

Eventually, that friendly competition gave way to two nonagenarians trying to take care of each other.

Paul Lynch wins Booker Prize with dystopian novel

LONDON (AP) — Irish writer Paul Lynch won the Booker Prize for fiction on Sunday with what judges called a "soul-shattering" novel about a woman's struggle to protect her family as Ireland collapses into totalitarianism

"Prophet Song," set in a dystopian fictional version of Dublin, was awarded the $63,000 literary prize at a ceremony in London. Canadian writer Esi Edugyan, who chaired the judging panel, said the book is "a triumph of emotional storytelling, bracing and brave" in which Lynch "pulls off feats of language that are stunning to witness.'

Lynch, 46, had been the bookies' favorite to win the prestigious prize, which usually brings a big boost in sales. His book beat five other finalists from Ireland, the U.K., the U.S. and Canada, chosen from 163 novels sub-

"This was not an easy book to write," Lynch said after being handed the Booker trophy. "The rational part of me believed I was dooming my career by writing this novel, though I had to write the book anyway. We do not have a choice in such matters."

Lynch has called "Prophet Song," his fifth novel, an attempt at "radical empathy" that tries to plunge readers into the experience of living in a collapsing society.
"I was trying to see into the modern chaos," he told the Booker website. 'The unrest in Western democracies. The problem of Syria — the implosion of an entire nation, the scale of its refugee crisis and the West's indifference.... I wanted to deepen the reader's immersion to such a degree that by the end of the book, they would not just know, but feel this problem for themselves."

The five prize judges met to pick the winner on Saturday, less than 48 hours after far-right violence erupted in Dublin following a stabbing attack on a group of children. Edugyan said that immediate events didn't directly influence the choice of winner.

Lynch said he was "astonished" by the riots "and at the same time I recognized the truth that this kind of energy is always there under the surface."

He said "Prophet Song" — written over four years starting in 2018 — "is a counterfactual novel. It's not a prophetic statement.'

"I wrote the book to articulate the message that the things that are happening in this book are occurring timelessly throughout the ages and maybe we need to deepen our own responses to that," he told reporters.
